PHOTOGRAPHY & FINE ART

In an age increasingly characterised by an emphasis on surface appearances over substance, and external attributes over intrinsic qualities, it would be easy to become disconnected or apathetic to the sense of deathlessness that pervades the contemporary condition. Artists have and will always continue to use the contemporary contexts that surround them as the raw material for peering beyond the façade of appearance, to the complexities of the human experience that lies beneath.

Unpeeled brings together a collective of artists from the graduating cohorts of BA (Hons) Fine Art: Studio, Site & Context, BA (Hons) Documentary Photography & Visual Activism, and BA (Hons) Photography in the Arts programmes at Swansea College of Art, UWTSD. The artists involved reflect upon their personal and collective experiences, exploring themes of history, the Anthropocene, trace, memory, myth, identity, technology & politics through an embracing of the ever-expanding dialogue between Fine Art, and Photographic practice.

Staff of the Fine Art, and Photography programmes at Swansea College of Art, UWTSD wish to thank the Unpeeled collective for the harmonious organisation and deft execution of their exhibition and congratulate them on producing such engaging bodies of work. We wish them every success with their future endeavours.

Mewn oes a nodweddir yn gynyddol gan bwyslais ar ymddangosiad arwynebol yn hytrach na sylwedd, a nodweddion allanol yn hytrach na rhinweddau cynhenid, byddai'n hawdd datgysylltu neu fod yn ddifater ynghylch yr ymdeimlad o anfarwoldeb sy'n treiddio i'r cyflwr cyfoes. Ar hyd yr oesoedd, ac am byth, bydd artistiaid yn defnyddio'r cyd-destunau cyfoes o'u cwmpas fel deunydd crai ar gyfer syllu y tu hwnt i ffasâd ymddangosiad, ar gymhlethdodau'r profiad dynol sy'n gorwedd islaw.

Mae'r artistiaid yn myfyrio ar eu profiadau personol a chyfunol, gan archwilio themâu hanes, yr Anthroposen, trywydd, cof, myth, hunaniaeth, technoleg a gwleidyddiaeth drwy gofleidio'r dialog sy'n ehangu'n barhaus rhwng Celf Gain ac arfer Ffotograffig.

Dirty Being

Ewan Coombs / Sid Lloyd's ongoing body of work Dirty Being draws on human interaction with sites of degradation, sedimentary build up, and places where life forms out of manmade detritus. Incorporating clay, installation and drawing, this multidisciplinary practice is born from material explorations. The work explores the destruction of the environment and our role within it; thus the viewer is invited to imagine a symbiotic rather than parasitic relationship with nature.

Mae corff cyfredol Ewan Coombs/Sid Lloyd o waith Dirty Being yn tynnu ar ryngweithio dynol gyda safleoedd o ddiraddiant, croniadau gwaddodol, a manau lle mae bywyd yn ffurfio allan o ddetritws o waith dyn. Gan gynnwys clai, mewnosodiad a lluniadu, mae'r arfer amlddisgyblaethol hwn yn deillio o archwiliadau materol. Mae'r gwaith yn edrych ar ddinistr yr amgylchedd a'n rôl ni yn hynny; felly gwahoddir y gwylwr i ddychmygu perthynas symbiotig yn hytrach na pharasitig gyda natur.

Varied Ambiences

Sheba Yashica's work takes interest in the nuances and ambiances of the urban environment, within which we are presented with countless non-spaces. Typically considered to be aesthetically unpleasing, these fringes and corners of man-made spaces are still able to occupy our conscience, even if only for fleeting intervals of time. By intentionally engaging with these spaces, Yashica looks to explore the atmosphere that is created and evoked by these often overlooked and neglected fragments of our built environment's make-up.

Changing Channels

Ollie Stewart's photographic series, Changing Channels delves into the complex history of queer representation in media, a landscape often dominated by stereotypes and invisibility. This photographic series explores the impact of these historical portrayals on the formation of contemporary queer identities.

Each image features a member of the LGBTQ+ community in a place they feel comfortable, juxtaposed with a vintage television on their heads. The static crackle and grainy image reflect both the fragmented history and the ongoing search for self-understanding within these limited portrayals.

It celebrates the act of unearthing forgotten narratives while acknowledging the need for a more nuanced and authentic portrayal of queer experiences across time. Changing Channels is a call to action, urging viewers to engage with the past and create a future with richer, more diverse representations of LGBTQ+ identities.

Lucca-Redcliffe is a multi-disciplinary artist, whose practise is a continuous exploration of portraying the self through the colour red. Working with red challenges Lucca-Redcliffe, removing security and comfort, replacing it with an intense and provoking pigment. Lucca-Redcliffe embeds honesty and a rawness throughout the process of deconstructing a material to reveal intimacy and the sensitivity from within. This enables her to communicate through a visual dialogue of a response from an interaction of touch, between body and material. She intends to create as an invitation to immerse a viewer into an environment that is a perspective of the internal self.

Artist amlddisgyblaethol yw Lucca-Redcliffe, gydag arfer sy'n archwiliad parhaus o bortreadu'r hunan drwy'r lliw coch. Within his current practice, Daniel Lewis explores the intricacies of his experience with internalised homophobia, and queer life in a heteronormative environment. Through a blend of introspection and social commentary, Lewis explores the nuances of the male nude and other imagery adopted by the queer community, keen to understand how and when does something that isn't innately sexualised or gendered become perceived as "gay", and challenging those ideologies.

That's Not Ladylike

Rosie Kent's work follows their diary entries during their journey of self-discovery concerning their gender. Kent's self-portraits capture the struggles of not conforming to societal standards and gender roles and how we have been brought up in a world that has strict expectations of how you should behave based on the sex you were assigned at birth. Kent's work looks deeper into the negative impact these standards can have on a person's mental and physical state when they feel pressured to comply with the modern societal expectations of gender

Walk Through

Walk Through is built around the complexity of gender stereotypes, femininity and internalised misogyny. Drawing upon feminist art history, her own personal experiences and those of people around her, Rees conveys her lived experience. This establishes a relatable and confrontational commentary on societal stereotypes and expectations of femininity.

Rees multidisciplinary practice confronts the male gaze, revealing other people's realities of navigating the construct of gender, femininity and misogyny in today's society.

The title of this series comes from Cormac McCarthy's novel, The Road which contemplates the ephemerality of parts of our lives that we would consider permanent. This series of paintings addresses the temporality of our relationships, as well as the acceptance of their absence.

By painting on unprimed canvas, these works are vulnerable to decomposition. There is potential for decay, UV light deterioration, cracking and other factors that will ultimately leave the painting irrevocably changed from how it once was.

Using a medium that traditionally renders the world as fixed and static, Thomas explores the therapeutic possibilities for photography to show us a world in fragments.

Mae Ellie Thomas yn canolbwyntio ar symboleiddio sut mae unigolion yn ymdrin â salwch sydd heb ei ganfod sy'n cael effaith sylweddol ar eu bywydau. Gan ddefnyddio cyfrwng sydd yn draddodiadol yn darlunio'r byd yn sefydlog a llonydd, mae Thomas yn archwilio posibiliadau therapiwtig ffotograffiaeth i ddangos byd mewn tameidiau i ni.

What Mothers Do Best

Chloe Marie's practice focuses on three main contexts - motherhood, place and her relationship with her daughter. Marie's ongoing body of work "What Mothers Do Best" is an exploration of unconditional love. Using black and white photography, the body of work documents the family dynamics of growth, both physically and conceptually.

Canolbwytir ar dri phrif gyd-destun yn arfer Chloe Marie - mamolaeth, lle a'i pherthynas gyda'i merch. Mae gwaith cyfredol Marie "What Mothers Do Best" yn archwilio cariad diamod. Gan ddefnyddio ffotograffiaeth du a gwyn mae'r corff o waith yn cofnodi dynameg deuluol twf, yn gorfforol ac yn gysyniadol.
